++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:
Some rain in the northwest, continuing mostly dry elsewhere.

This Evening and Tonight:
Dry and sunny end to the day for many areas, but cloud thickening in the northwest, to bring some rain to Northern Ireland and western Scotland overnight. Otherwise clear spells with another frost and the odd patch of fog.

Sunday:
Northern Ireland and parts of Scotland cloudy with patchy light rain and drizzle. Otherwise another day of sunny spells and patchy cloud. Feeling warm by afternoon in the sunshine.

Outlook for Monday to Wednesday:
Continuing mostly dry with the rain affecting the far northwest dying away as it moves southeast on Tuesday. Daytime temperatures close to or above average, but still some cold nights.
